

Ear infections need treatment

By Caroline C. Wolf

The Parent Infant Program reminds parents that frequent ear infections need to be seen by a doctor before the ear drains.

Young children learn so many of their new words through listening. When an ear infection occurs it not only hurts a whole lot, it makes the words harder to hear.

Even though the sun is up it is still cold and blowy. Put a hat on your child to cover his ears.

Do you have any mismatched gloves left over from winter that you don't know what to do with? Why not make one into a toy for your infant?

Here's how: Wash the glove and stuff it with pieces of cloth. Sew up the bottom. Add eyes, nose, and mouth on the palm and — Surprise! — a fun toy for your baby that was easy to make and didn't cost any money.
