

Free tutoring now available to minority nursing students

Free tutoring is available for minority — Black, Asian, Hispanic, Alaska Native, American Indian — pre-nursing and nursing students at the Anchorage Community College and the University of Alaska at Anchorage and Fairbanks.

Students are encouraged to seek help before having difficulties with classes. Tutoring is not limited to coursework in nursing, according to officials of the Alaska Native Health Career Program's Special Nursing Project.

The program will pay for tutoring in any coursework that is preparatory to nursing or that will apply to the student's degree in nursing.

Those who would like more information may contact Katherine A. Johnson, director of the Alaska Native Health Career Program's Special Nursing Project at 3890 University Lake Drive, Anchorage 99508; 786-4664 or 786-4644.
