

Times Editor Wins Top Award For Editorial

Tundra Times editor, Howard Rock, last Saturday received the State's 1965 top award in the editorial category for his editorial "Hesitation Is Dangerous."

He also received honorable mention for outstanding individual feature story or series in a newspaper in 1965 for his Arctic Survival series.

The awards for the state's outstanding newspaper work were presented to the winners at the 13th annual awards banquet of the Alaska Press Club at the Westward Hotel in Anchorage.

Fairbanks Daily News-Miner collected nine awards and Anchorage Daily News and Anchorage Daily Times shared six honors each. The News was given the top award for its series, "The Village People."

(Continued on Page 8)

Top Award...

(Continued from Page 1)

Other top award winners were: Betzi Woodman for her series, "One Year Later: The Decision to Rebuild;" Al Anthon of the News-Miner for an airline advertisement; Joanne Wold, News-Miner, for her women's news section; Al Phelps, Nome Nugget, for feature advertising, and many others.