

$65,500 Grant

The University of Alaska, Geophysical Institute, has received a National Science Foundation Grant of $65,500.00, the office Senator Ted Stevens announced.

The one-year grant is for collaborative research in sound signals to forecast atmospheric conditions relating to urban air pollution.