

WHALER'S COOKS—A whale has been caught and the women of Point Hope are preparing snacks that have become traditional at whaling time. Mrs. Claudia Tuzroyluke, left, is making and frying Eskimo doughnuts the women learned to make when in years past they acquired flour. Mrs. Ruth Nash, Tundra Times editor's sister, standing by the steam broiler in which she's cooking fresh bowhead whale muktuk from her brother Allen Rock's whale he had caught about two hours before on April 23. Two Coleman stoves are being used for cooking. A canvas tent has been set up to house the whaler's cooks. Plenty of hot tea and coffee was supplied the whalers who were in the process of cutting up two whales caught on April 23.
