

New Fire Station

JUNEAU - A new fire station opened recently at Anchorage International Airport enables fire and rescue units to reach any runway location within two minutes Public Works Commissioner George Easley said.

Previously maximum response time was three minutes.

The new station, the airport's second fire and rescue facility, is located west of the north/south runway.

It is equipped with two water-foam trucks, a 5,000 gallon water tanker and a tracked vehicle with water-foam and dry chemical capability.
