

Alaska Supreme Court Nominees Submitted

JUNEAU—The Alaska Judicial Council has submitted the names of five persons to Gov. Walter J. Hickel for consideration for appointment to two positions on the Alaska Supreme Court.

Under legislation passed by the first session of the Fifth Alaska Legislature in 1967, the state's high court will be expanded from its present three members to five on Dec. 1 of this year.

The men nominated by the council are:

Superior Court Judge James M. FitzGerald of Anchorage, a former U.S. attorney in Alaska and former Alaska Commissioner of Public Safety under former Gov. Willaim Egan;

George Boney, also of Anchorage, another former U.S. Attorney now associated with the law firm of Burr, Boney and Peace;

Willaim V. Boggess, a Fairbanks lawyer;

Charles J. Clasby, also of Fairbanks, a former assistant U.S. attorney at Nome.

Roger G. Connor, former lawyer in Juneau and a past president of the Alaska Bar Association, now living and practicing law in Anchorage.

The Governor has 45 days from the time of nomination to appoint two of the men to the high court. The two selected will join Chief Justice Buell A. Nesbett, Anchorage; Associate Justice John H. Dimond, Juneau; and Associate Justice Jay A. Rabinowitz, Fairbanks, on the high bench.

The members of the Supreme Court serve for three year terms, going before the voters of Alaska at the general election each year for reconfirmation.

Associate justices receive a salary of $26,000 annually. The chief justice recieves $27,000.