

Pipeline impact report

Attorney General Avrum M. Gross announced today the publication of a lengthy and detailed report analyzing the impact which construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline has had and will continue to have on the criminal justice system in Alaska.

The report is entitled "An Impact Analysis of Construction of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline on the Administration of Criminal Justice in Alaska" and was prepared by the Alaska Department of Law under the direction of Deputy Attorney General Dan Hickey, chief prosecutor for the state of Alaska. Gross indicated that the report represents the final product of a comprehensive study conducted by his department through the assistance of a grant provided by the United States Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.
