

Management skills program to be offered this August

A one-week residential program for owners and senior executives of minority businesses is set for August 25-30 at the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration. Participants there will have an opportunity to strengthen their management and financial skills and learn the most current business techniques.

The curriculum will address crucial business issues such as how the proposed tax changes may affect minority businesses. The program will cover management topics such as finance, accounting, communication, marketing, strategic management and operations. Database management will also be introduced.

For more information, contact: Minority Business Executive Seminar, The Amos Tuck School at Dartmouth College, Hanover, NH 03755.