

An Unconventional Man For Unconventional Times.

We came to Alaska for the beauty and the opportunities available in a young, vibrant state. It's our state. We have a responsibility to protect it . . . to find a balance between development and preserving our quality of life. But we have to move forward. Only progress makes it possible to stay."

—Wally Hickel

Alaskans young and old, from every walk of life, encouraged Wally Hickel to run for Governor. At a rally in Anchorage, Wally received overwhelming support.

Why?

Wally Hickel's entry into the race for governor was unconventional. But these are unconventional times. If you want to know why, just ask yourself this question:

Will you survive four more years of leadership like the past four years?

For too many years, our elected officials have told us what we can't do. They have made us targets for outside interest groups. They have allowed federal mandates to go unchallenged.

We've given our State to leaders who side-step the tough decisions; who hide in the safety of numbers; who look to the next election, not to the future. Now we beg those same leaders to cut spending, to streamline government, and to patch our roads.

That's why Wally Hickel is running for Governor.
That's why Jack Coghill is running with him.

Now You Have A Clear Choice.

Now, you have three choices for Governor. Two candidates from a political establishment that has spent more money and done less for Alaskans in the past 10 years, than any time in the history of our State. Or, Wally Hickel, former Governor and consistent supporter of responsible growth, responsible government, and the right of Alaskans to determine their own destiny.

Of the 700 people who attended the Anchorage rally, over 400 volunteered to help on the campaign.
