Letter to the Editor

I would like to publicly thank the many thousands of people who deliver the mail in Alaska. This would include all of our employees, airline employees, private contractors and our customers.

This also includes the media who have given us a good balanced press and TV coverage. They have pointed out our mistakes, but have also given us credit when it was due.

Thanks and appreciation go to the families and employers of those who have lost their lives while attempting to deliver the mails.

I have heard an 'outsider' from within the Postal Service say, "delivering mail in Alaska is like delivering it to the moon." Thanks again for enabling us to get to the moon.

Sincerely,

Ivan W. Hanson
