

Young Chupiks sample pot luck delicacies (above). The waterfront (below) is full of activity.

The Tundra, the guest of holders meet (top right) one evening dancers as the night. A great Native dance Fest. The our year.

Tundra Times

visits Chupiks

of Chevak

The Tundra Times, represented by photographer Andy Klamser and the TT publisher, was the guest of the Chupiks of Chevak during the Chevak Company Corporation annual shareholders meeting in July and the annual Chevak Tundra Fest State Fair in August. Leo Moses (top right) and family entertained the visitors with dinner and tales of the Chupik people the evening. Traditional dances were performed each evening by such talented and graceful dancers as the woman (above) to the delight of young and elderly observers such as those at (bottom right). Wayne Hill (immediate left), Chevak Company Corporation manager, and his wife, and family were warm and cordial hosts as they shared their home with the visitors. A great variety of activities, Native games, chess and pool tournaments, pot luck dinners, Native dances, bingo games, and even disco entertainment were offered during the Tundra Fest. The Tundra Times hopes to return next year. The event is highly recommended to readers. It is usually scheduled during the first week of August every summer.