

Entries sought for contest

Alaska Construction & Oil magazine is accepting entries for its ninth annual "Construction Project of the Year" competition — the only competition of its kind in Alaska — until Feb. 2.

Created to discover and honor Alaska's most innovative and successful buildings and heavy engineering projects — large and small — the competition is limited to Alaska construction projects completed during calendar year 1986. Entries will be accepted in three categories: industrial buildings, commercial/public use buildings and heavy engineered construction.

Entry forms and information are available at the magazine's office at 360 West Benson Blvd., Suite 206, Anchorage, 99503 or 109 W. Mercer Street, Seattle, Wash. 98119.
