

Oklahoma Indians to meet

"The State of American Indian Economic Development in Oklahoma" will be explored in a statewide conference May 27 at the University of Oklahoma at Norman, Okla.

The conference is sponsored by the Southwest Center for Human Relations Studies at the school.

"The conference is designed to provide significant information on the status of American Indian economic development in Oklahoma and to explore strategies to enhance economic activity and the economic relationships between the Indian nations, the state of Oklahoma and local communities throughout the state," said Margaret Abudu Green, director of the Southwest Center for Human Relations Studies.

A number of state and national leaders will make major presentations on Indian economic development. In addition, the economic impact of the Indian presence in the state will be assessed.

Additional information is available from the OU Southwest Center for Human Relations Studies, 555 Constitution Ave., Suite 141, Norman, Okla., 73037.
