

When Rachael Parker and her father, Phil Moreno say they carve tiny totems, they mean TINY totems, as the earring held in Parker's fingers illustrates. The two have recently opened a shop in Anchorage's Post Office Mall, which they call The Tiny Totem. Native artists and craftsmen are welcome to come in and work. Artists wishing to sell their work at the store set their own prices, and the Tiny Totem takes a 15 percent commission.