

RESOURCE APPRENTICESHIP PROGRAM FOR STUDENTS

Tiffany Peterson, James Grant-Holmberg and Martha Christenson teach students at Camp Habitat in Fairbanks how to use compasses.

"RAPS taught me responsibility and how to have fun while you're working hard. I think what I liked the most was getting to know the kids and being outdoors all day.

"I believe that everyone chosen for the program is lucky and bound to come away with a lot more than they started with."

—Tiffany Peterson, Fairbanks

RAPS places high school students in summer apprenticeships with natural resource agencies. Through RAPS, Tiffany, James and Martha taught environmental education this past summer with their Camp Habitat mentor, Jim Logan. Their apprenticeships were funded by the Alaska Conservation Foundation, W.K. Kellogg Foundation, National Environmental Education & Training Foundation, and JTPA.
