PUBLIC WELCOME

Over the rivers and through the woods.

To Juneau and Back With the Legislative Teleconference Network.

Many rural Alaskans are farther away from Juneau than they are from Siberia! But, thanks to Alascom's unique Legislative Teleconference Network, they can visit the State Capitol without ever leaving home.

The LTN is a sophisticated system that uses audio and video two-way telecommunications technology to exchange ideas, opinions, and information between Juneau and other Alaskan communities. So the City Council of Bethel can put questions before a legislative committee in person. And a citizens' group can discuss problems and objectives with governmental agencies in a different location.

The satellite-age technology that made the Legislative Teleconference Network possible is the foundation of Alascom's success in linking all the corners of this vast land with each other, and with the world. Across the tundra, over countless rivers and through a thousand miles of woodland, people are talking - face-to-face. And heart-to-heart.
