

Minor Attack Hospitalizes Sen. Bartlett

Senator Bartlett entered the U.S. Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Maryland, last week after a preliminary medical examination revealed that he had suffered a minor heart attack sometime ago. The Senator had gone to the doctor for treatment of a cold.

Exhaustive medical tests completed on September 1 determined that the Senator suffered a coronary occlusion "some weeks or months prior to hospitalization."

The attending physician said the heart condition was stabilized. The doctor said he had prescribed a period of complete rest for the Senator and that "an early release is contemplated."

Senator Bartlett has been assured that he will be able to resume his Senate duties and go to Alaska for the general election campaign in which he is seeking re-election.
