

Museum exhibits Alaska Native dolls

Alaska Native dolls from the Permanent collection of the Anchorage Museum of History and Art will be on view throughout the summer on the second floor of the Museum Atrium.

The exhibit includes a wide range of dolls acquired by the museum over many years, including small ivory figurines, beloved children's toys and early examples of dolls acquired by traders and collectors.

A variety of materials, traditional and modern, demonstrate the range of expression found in this popular and endearing craft.
