"My dad's an Alaskan who's always believed in Seward's potential. That's why he bought radio station KRXA. For me, it's an opportunity to stay and work in my own hometown. Jobs are a big concern to us, but so is keeping Seward and other peninsula communities as beautiful as they've always been.

"I was born in Seward, the same year Richfield discovered the Swanson River field. And, according to my dad, people were just as concerned then about preserving the Kenai area.

"Today the Kenai Peninsula, once 'remote wilderness', is one of the state's most popular recreation areas, easy to get to, with lots of things to do.

"Sure, there's oil. And for my generation, a future.
A growing community.
A good place to live."

When there's news on the Kenai Peninsula, Skip Fletcher is one of the first to know.

The Alaska people love and opportunities people need. At Atlantic Richfield Company, our goal is to help preserve both.
