

Our decisions are based on a good return.

This is an important salmon spawning stream in Southeast Alaska. It is located in the middle of a major logging area operated by Klukwan Forest Products. The trees and vegetation kept in place near streams like this make up what is called a "buffer." It protects the banks from erosion and ensures the return of this critical resource.

Prudent management of our timber resources is vitally important for Alaska's future. Klukwan Forest Products is committed to working with other industries and state and federal agencies to ensure a fair balance is struck between economic goals and environmental concerns. After all, trees are at the root of everything we do.
