To Juneau and Back with the Legislative Teleconference Network.

Many rural Alaskans are farther away from Juneau than they are from Siberia. But—thanks to the unique Legislative Teleconference Network established by the Alaskan Legislature, with Alascom's help—they can visit the capital without ever leaving home.

The Network is a sophisticated system that uses audio and video two-way telecommunications technology for the exchange of ideas and information between Juneau and other communities. So the City Council of Bethel can put questions before a legislative committee—in person. Or a citizen's group can discuss problems and objectives with governmental agencies in a different location.

The satellite-age technology that made the LTN possible is the foundation of Alascom's success in linking all the corners of this vast land with each other, and with the world. Across the tundra, over countless rivers and through a thousand miles of woodland, people are talking—face to face. And heart to heart.

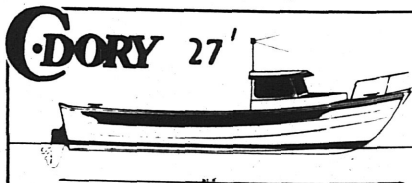

For more information about the Legislative Teleconference Network, contact Alascom's Marketing Department. Ask the long distance operator for 24-hour 7000 ext. 7396 (toll free). In Anchorage, call 264-7396.
