

School board wants minority advisor

The Anchorage School District is soliciting applications for a position on a board that advises on the education of minority students.

Superintendent Dr. E.E. Davis said the Anchorage School Board hopes to interview applicants and make an appointment to the Citizens' Advisory Educational Concerns Committee during January.

The committee also reviews

textbook adoption, selection of films and other supplementary material, and proposed changes in course title or content, Davis said.

Applications are available in the district's Secondary Education Office at 4600 DeBarr Ave. in Anchorage, phone 269-2212.

Deadline for submitting nominations is Dec. 29.
