

Long Distance Renewal from Friend

Just at closing time on Friday, the phone rang. At first Lois Keating, Tundra Times office manager, thought it was a routine subscription renewal.

After giving the name and address, the caller, Marty Colby of Green Belt, Maryland, remarked casually, "By the way, I'm calling from Maryland . . ."

She then also ordered a gift subscription for a friend. Inquiring how the Tundra Times was getting along these days, Lois informed her we were still "just getting by."

Marty said "That's how I heard about you in the first place, you know. I read an article about the struggles you were having. In that case, I'll send along a donation in addition to the renewal and new subscription."

---

lived in an igloo, Kazim, it's everybody's house — poor man, rich man's house."

The new Alaska Federation of Natives, Inc., hopes to become "everybody's house."