Candidate Eyes Jumbo Jets

ANCHORAGE — Recent reports that the auto industry will use jumbo-jets for hauling cars was cited today by U.S. Senate candidate Mike Gravel as supporting his proposal for using the same kind of jumbo-jets in Alaska.

Gravel has calimed that using jets for cargo freight could cut Alaska's cost of living suband the yards.

They worked just as hard as any employees does. No matter what low wages they earned they'd never squawk about it.
Lots of time after they had finished the job they should do, they'd come and looked for more. I'd tell them this:

"Take heart, you young people is only beginning. Curtain is only going up. Only do your job faithfully and some day, you young people, one of you will become an leader."

"Where?" question was heard.

I answered to him and said,
"probably here in your own village on some places. You young people keep up your good works, and God bless you."

ALSO MUKTUK

Never look around for good meals. Three cafes in Barrow serves good meal, any variety you wish to eat it's there. But don't forget to mentioned MUKTUK, they have them too.

There's also one across from the village who owns this cafe, his name is Mr. Thomas Brower.

In this cafe you will find even Eskimos art and crafts work, he handles them too. Serves good meals too. Try them and find for yourself.

stantially.
"Newsweek magazine reported last week that General Motors is negotiating with United Airlines about converting a Boeing 747 into a long-haul car carrier," Gravel said.
"Auto officials there say that a modified 747 could haul 30 cars and fly them from Detroit to California at $47 less per car than the present cost of rail shipping, and in one-tenth the time.

"This has immense implications for Alaska," Gravel said.
"Are we really going to sink what little revenue we have into railroads which may already be obsolete? Between Detroit and California, railroads already constructed and operating are becoming inefficient," Gravel said.

"I think that tells us something about Alaska's future railroads, which are only on the drawing boards."

Gravel cited the experiments of the huge 228-ton CSA Galaxy experimental plan, and the supersonic transports (SST) as proof that the day of the big cargo-plane is not far away.

"Expansion of foundation airports in key cities will mean we can take advantage of these cargo jets soon," Gravel said,
"and that means an immediate drop in the cost of living."
