Letters to the Editor

Elim, Alaska
November 27, 1968

Dear Sir:

Will you please print the following letter in the "Letters to the Editor" section of your newspaper?

When the regional high schools were proposed a few years ago, the biggest and practically the only argument of their creation was that the children would be home for the holidays, closer ties would be maintained and the bane of the boarding schools, homesickness, would be well on its way to being licked.

The advocates of the regional boarding schools pointed out that under the then existing system, the students left their homes in August and did not return home until the following May. They intimated if the regional schools were built all this would be changed.

Last year in December, we heard via the grapevine that there was to be no Christmas vacation. We hurriedly got up a petition signed by almost every adult in the village asking that the students be allowed to come home for a week.

We got a nice letter from the Beltz administration explaining that contracts had already been let for a certain number of teaching days, . . . budget considerations prohibited it this year, etc. . . . BUT . . . WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR. . . .

Last month our Elim representative on the Beltz Advisory School Board returned to the village with the news that again there was to be no Christmas vacation. We were again advised to wait until next year.

If our students are going to be kept in the boarding school for the full nine month term without a vacation they would be better off going to Chemawa, Mt. Edgecumbe, or Chilloco. At least they get the benefit of a little educational travel when they go to these distant schools.

We feel that with only a little planning on the part of the State educational system a way could be found to have our children with us over the holidays.

We know that most of the villages must feel as we do. . . Our children are only a few minutes (or at most a few hours) away from us and will not be allowed to come home. This is worse than having them at Chemawa where we know and understand it is impossible to have them home.

WE MISS OUR CHILDREN AND WE WANT THEM HOME FOR CHRISTMAS.

UDALL HONORS BURKE RILEY

The Department of the Interior has announced in Washington, D.C. that five of its Pacific Northwest and Alaska employees have been named to receive the department's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Award, at ceremonies December 11 in the nation's capitol.

Among them was the well known Alaskan Burke Riley of Juneau, regional coordinator for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Riley became regional coordinator and chairman of the department's field committee in Alaska in 1961. He brought to his assignment extensive experience in Alaskan affairs.

This included service as administrative assistant to the territorial governor, secretary of the territory (a Presidential appointment), membership in the territorial legislature and state constitutional convention.

Just prior to joining the department, Riley served as executive assistant to the first governor of the new state.

"This broad background," reads Secretary Udall's citation, "coupled with his high intelligence, good judgment and diplomatic skills have made him an outstanding representative of the Department in the difficult period of transition from territorial status to statehood."

Burke Riley was cited for his outstanding work after the devastating earthquake in Alaska in 1964.

He has played a key role in a number of committee programs, including the successful effort to encourage the training and hire of natives by the Federal Government in Alaska.

"In recent months, he has contributed significantly to the intensive search for a realistic solution to the native lands claim problem."

"For his dedication and skill in representing Alaska in the department and the department in Alaska, Mr. Riley is granted the Distinguished Service Award of the Department of the Interior," concludes Secretary Udall's citation.

Burke Riley is married to former Doris Bartlett, daughter of Vide and Sen. E.L. (Bob) Bartlett.
