Teacher Orientation Crab Feed At Mt. Edgecumbe

Alaska.

Orientation for new Bureau of Indian Affairs day school teachers will be held August 12-16 at Mt. Edgecumbe.

According to Warren 1. Tiffany, the BIA's Education Chief, approximately 40 new teachers will be arriving for the week-long workshop session, along with 15 audio-visual aides.

conference will cover such topics as linguistics, teaching English as a second language (TESL), the cultural background of the Alaska Native learner, and art instruction.

The BIA presently operates 73 day schools in the state, most of them in the remote villages of the Arctic.

This year's orientation workshop is directed by Miss Eunice Logan of the BIA's Juneau Area Office.

Featured speakers will include: Don Webster of Wycliffe Translators speaking on linguistics; Evelyn Bauer, a TESL specialist; Dr. Arnold Griese of the University of Alaska speaking on teaching literature to elementary children; and David Young, an art specialist from the BIA's Washington education office.

Ten Alaska Native advisory school board members from across the state will also attend as resource personnel. These individuals are active in the affairs of their village day schools, and their opinions and advice are important to the

Shageluk Receives $8000 RDA Grant

JUNEAU- The Rural Development Agency in the Office of the Governor has approved a grant of $8000 to the village of Shageluk in western Alaska.

The money will be used to pay the wages of village men constructing gravel streets and installing culverts in the village. Adult population of Shageluk is 80. Work on the project began July 15.

Shageluk is on the banks of the Innoko River about 225 miles southeast of Nome.

Supervising the project will be Robert Dutchman, Bernard John and Raymond Dutchman, a committee appointed by the village council.

Pollock said "with 4.5 billion dollars unspent in the 'pipeline' there is enough money to continue the program at the present level for two years without appropriating one cent."

Between 1946-1966 we have given away in foreign aid 118.4 billion dollars to our so-called friends. The largest recipient of aid during the twenty year per-iod was France with over seven billion dollars.

We had to pay in interest alone on this sum 52.8 billion dollars over the twenty year per-

Thus in reality the total cost of foreign assistance is 171 billion dollars.

During that same period the national debt increased 104 billion dollars.

Pollock said this moratorium would simply apply the same criteria already implemented during this session of Congress for our own domestic programs.

The five largest recipient received almost one nations third of the total. Of the five, four are considered prosperous.
