therapy for patients at the Alaska Psychiatric Institute is paying off in happy dividends.

A puppy and a young cat have joined the staff and their playful antics are brightening the days for all at the Institute.

Recently, Miss Kathy Franz and Miss Julie Allerdine, therapists at API, requested the SPCA to donate a kitten and a puppy and so it was that "Dubie," a young tomcat, and "Siggie," (short for Sigmund Freud), a brown and black terrier with big feet, joined the therapy staff.

Reports are that several patients heretofore difficult to reach, are joining the others in enjoyment of Dubie and Siggie.

As far as the kitten and the pup are concerned, their "work" days are all play—and everybody's happy!

Edward M. Benson, Jr., Atlantic Richfield vice-president, said last week in Dallas, Texas that the Prudhoe Bay oil field will produce 10,000 barrels daily.

He said the discovery was the largest ever discovered on the North American continent.

Benson also said there are tremendous quantities of natural gas in the Prudhoe field. He said his company intends to make this gas available to the gas hungry lower 48 states.

A Great Book by MUKTUK MARSTON About the ALASKA TERRITORIAL GUARD

The MEN OF THE TUNDRA is a book that gave credit where it's due. Muktuk Marston praised the ability of Alaska's native men under war time conditions. He commanded the Alaska Territorial Guard with understanding, defended them from discrimination. Major Marston formed a fine nucleus for the present crack native battalion of the Alaska National Guard. Muktuk tells the epic tale with humor and, above all, with ever present understanding of the men he worked with. A fine reading.
