

BIA Starts Training Counselors for Students

Commissioner of Indian Affairs Robert L. Bennett has announced a year-long counselor training course for selected Bureau of Indian Affairs educators, a new program designed to "fill a need for counselors trained to help Indian youth adjust to cross cultural problems."

The new program under a contract with the Bureau's Division of Education, begins this month at Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, Ariz. Dr. James R. Frederick is the University's project director for this BIA Counselor Training Program, a part of a Bureau-wide effort to implement new programs of Pupil Personnel Services in BIA schools.

The plan is to start with 30 Bureau educators selected from applicants who have bachelor's degrees and qualify for graduate training.

"Under this new program, we expect to develop a new degree of professionalism for the counselor who will be trained in the general areas of human development and in the sensitive field of helping the Indian student adjust to differences in culture values and environment," said Bennett.

To accomplish this, they will be involved in intensive studies including counseling relationships learning theory, practices and diagnosis, and "on-the-job" training in schools serving bi-cultural students. The intern-counselors will be under the supervision of master teachers, local BIA administrators and the University staff.

Bennett said that before educators can talk about career development, they must help many Indians understand the world of work as it applies to today's society.

"This is by no means a simple concept to people whose cultural heritage reflects a time when work was left to the women, and hunting and fighting were man's main functions," said the Commissioner.

Training and workshops will be conducted in BIA schools, kindergarten through the 12th grade, under voluntary arrangements.

The most successful participants will be used as full-time professional guidance counselors upon their return to their school situation.

AHRL Holding Heart Clinic For Eskimos

The Arctic Health Research Laboratory is holding a heart clinic for all Eskimo men age 15 and over in Anchorage during the week of October 14th and in Fairbanks the week of October 21st.

At the clinic the doctors will do a physical examination, determine blood pressure, obtain a small amount of blood, measure height and weight, inquire about the kinds of food eaten and do an electrocardiogram.

If a heart problem is found the person will be notified and advised to get treatment.

We would appreciate it if you would please post this poster in your office. We have mailed out about 600 individual invitations to the clinics in Anchorage and Fairbanks and we hope the poster and other publicity may reach men we do not know about.

Caribou Meat for Times Banquet Affable Raymond Paneak Brings

Affable, smiling Raymond Paneak of Anaktuvuk Pass flew in from his village this week and brought 55 pounds of caribou meat as his contribution to the Tundra Times Sixth Anniversary Banquet tomorrow night at the Switzerland.

The caribou will add variety to the banquet dinner that will consist of 500 pounds of Alaska king crab and two carcasses of reindeer.

The crab is being provided by the Kodiak Area Native Association.

UA President Lauds 4-H Program

COLLEGE — Alaska's 2,127 members of the 4-H movement are "benefiting from a most important educational program," according to University of Alaska President William R. Wood.

On the eve of National 4-H Week, Oct. 6-12, Dr. Wood said, "We at the university are proud of our privilege to administer 4-H through our Cooperative Extension Service. tion and the reindeer is being furnished by Thomas Johnson of Nome and president of the Northwestern Reindeer Processing Co.

Raymond Paneak said that large herds of caribou were migrating through the Pass.

"Just before I got on the plane about 500 caribou were passing by the village," said Paneak.

He said caribou were in good shape this year with the rump fat of about an inch and half.

Extension Service.

"In a sense, every 4-H member is a University of Alaska student because he is the beneficiary of a movement that provides a worthy and vital education."

Dr. Wood said experience has shown that "the skills and personal qualities instilled by 4-H are great assets to young people when they eventually move on to higher education."

"On behalf of the university, I salute all Alaska 4-H members and their leaders as they prepare to observe National 4-H week."

BIOGRAPHY OF A WINNER: Rafer Johnson, shown winning a decathlon race at the 1960 Olympics in Rome, began his winning ways as a newspaperboy in Texas. After moving to California, he was a high school letter man in four sports, setting seven track and field league records. As a UCLA senior, Rafer was student body president in 1959. He had first broken the ten-event world decathlon record four years earlier. He placed second at the 1956 Melbourne Olympics, then took the 1960 decathlon gold medal. In 1962, Rafer Johnson became West Coast Director of People to People, and has since appeared in movies and been a network sportscaster.

NEWSPAPERBOYS GET AHEAD

This year, International Newspaperboy Day coincides with the opening of the 1968 Summer Olympics in Mexico City. So this is a fitting time to give some thought to the things that make America — and Americans — great. Olympic decathlon champion Rafer Johnson puts it this way: "When I was carrying newspapers, I soon realized you've got to deliver in a way that's dependable. The job usually isn't easy, but no work worth doing is worth less than your best. America's newspaperboys are learning that it takes something extra to compete in today's world. I wish them success with this reminder: The winning formula is study, work, training to be ready."

The Treasury Department's U.S. Savings Bonds Division proudly joins in this traditional salute to the nation's newspaperboys. They've helped promote Savings Bonds and Stamps, and are buying Bonds themselves out of earnings — in many cases, to help pay for college some day. Newspaperboys know what's happening. And they'll help to make the future better for all of us.
